The Turing Trust, set up by Alan Turing's great nephew James Turing, is striving to reduce computer waste here in the UK whilst providing IT resources for educational purposes in African countries. Based in Edinburgh, we receive donations from organisations and individuals from across the UK, and our trained volunteers assist us in restoring and refurbishing these computers – ready for use in African classrooms. Our volunteers are also on hand during shipping days, the highlight of the Turing Trust calendar, when we pack up to 500 computers and assorted cables into a shipping container ready for a long journey.

We would not be able to achieve this if it weren't for the organisations who support us through donations of IT equipment and give to us financially to allow us to ship to Africa. We're always keen to meet new people and organisations and see how we can work together to achieve our goals.

To fundraise for the Turing Trust, and our projects in Africa, we're currently planning the Turing Talks conference! Taking place on the 13th June at the National Museum of Scotland (Edinburgh), this conference will be providing an insight into innovative technology. We would like to welcome all who are passionate about using technology to challenge the way we change our world to join us for this exciting day! Tickets are available from:
